HETCH HETCHY: THEN AND NOW

100 years after the Raker Act
“The dam, which wasn’t completed until 1923, started delivering water to San Francisco taps in 1934”
“Three short years after the [Raker] Act was signed, Congress atoned by passing the National Park Service Act, largely to protect our national parks from any further disfigurement,” according to Restore Hetch Hetchy, a nonprofit trying to bring down the dam.
“Now Restore Hetch Hetchy…will argue that San Francisco’s current water system violates state and federal law.”
