We are visiting the Dress Codes exhibition. When we see a room with lots of clothes, we know we are here!

There are two entrances to the Dress Codes exhibition. One entrance is by the front desk. The second entrance is towards the back near the other gallery.

Dress Codes is about what we wear, how we wear it and why.

The exhibition focuses on blue jeans, plaid shirt, fringed jacket, aloha shirt, China Poblana dress, and the cowboy boot.

The museum puts the objects in glass cases and behind wires and metal barriers to keep the objects safe. While we look at them, we can stand with our arms at our sides, behind our back, or folded in front of us.

Around a corner is the Community Closet. Here we can we can answer questions about our own fashion choices by writing on a Post-It note, filling out a worksheet, or pressing a button to show our answer.

As we continue through the gallery, we'll see more displays with clothes.

The second part of the exhibition continues in the second gallery. We will exit one room and enter the other to continue learning about Dress Codes. When we see the wall of cowboy boots we know we are there!

This room focuses on China Poblana dress. We will see different dresses with colorful details.

There are chairs we can sit on if we need to rest.

We have visited the Dress Codes Exhibition! We can exit the gallery the same way we came in and continue exploring the museum.
