We are going to the Autry Museum of the American West. When we see the big orange building with white letters, we know we are there!

The courtyard entrance has tile floors and a big statue of Gene Autry and his horse Champion.

The main entrance has many doors we can use to enter the museum.

When we enter the museum, we will go to Visitors Services to purchase an admission ticket. The people at Visitors Services are happy to help us if we have questions and have maps of the museum that help us find our way.
